Councilman Steve Wolfson Earns Police Endorsement
Early support gives councilman a significant boost as he starts his campaign.

Steve Wolfson was informed on Friday that he has earned the endorsement of the Las Vegas Police Protective Association for his re-election to the Las Vegas City Council.

Wolfson sees the early endorsement as a strong statement about his record and his ability to wage a vigorous re-election campaign. "I am proud to have the support of the men and women of our police department, corrections officers, municipal court employees and marshals. As residents, we trust our local police officers to keep us safe. The fact that they trust me as their councilman is an honor."

In the endorsement letter, Detective David Kallas, executive director of the police group, wrote, "Your community involvement and dedication to the residents of our community speaks volumes of your character. You have gained much needed experience during your tenure that has made you a valuable asset to the City Council."

Councilman Steve Wolfson is working hard on re-election. He's already met with many neighbors, community groups and members of the fundraising community. Said Wolfson, "It's great to start a campaign with a strong endorsement. I've pulled together a great campaign team, I'm starting early and working hard. As in my last campaign, I will focus on person to person contact and protecting the quality of life of our neighborhoods."
